Urban Alliance (UA) provides economically-disadvantaged young people with the exposure, opportunity, support & training needed to prepare them for lifelong economic self-sufficiency. UA's core program matches under-served high school seniors with paid, professional internships, job skills training, 1-on-1 mentoring & post-program support to expand their idea of what is possible in the future.

Who we serve

High school seniors from under-resourced communities who are at risk of becoming disconnected from pathways to economic self-sufficiency, and lack the skills, experience & networks needed for success.

Why we serve

Low-income youth often don't have access to the same economic opportunities as their peers, hampering their ability to become self-sufficient adults. They need an open door; UA can be the key.
