Think there could be more upside vs. downside in sharing – as it's a diverse group and includes some naysayers? (but interested to hear others)

Suppose one downside might be those who didn't get an invite into the room feeling left out.

OK thanks.

Possible some members of the public or media may ask to see our invite list. COG's not-FOIAable so we don't need to provide but there's a perception thing there, too. Need to think about that one a little. Let me know if you have thoughts on that.

How does this sound? Borrowed some language from the Run of Show.

- The focus of this event is for COG's members, partners, and community stakeholders to have an in-depth discussion. We've worked with our members to ensure a diverse group of community leaders were invited. We are also offering a livestream for others interested in following the discussion.
- There will be many other opportunities for engagement related to specific Amazon projects and site plans.
- We encourage everyone to follow updates on the Arlington County /Amazon website and the State website. (we can provide links on our site to these...)

Additional points for media sign-in.

- Remind media that the program is for stakeholder questions/not media questions.
- Mention that post-event we can help connect media with interviewees (day-of we can confirm that we can offer Dorsey, at least)
