Great to hear you can both make it! I think having you over as a team would be ideal, so let's shoot for that.

Andy,

Useful information. Thank you. I'll have Krysta work with Mason on a date unless you'd like us at separate time.

Christian and Katie,

I wanted to share a follow up from the August article which came across my desktop last week. The supply picture seems to be helping in that rents are dropping in Seattle, starting with some of the costliest markets first:

<https://www.seattletimes.com/business/real-estate/amid-building-boom-1-in-10-seattle-apartments-are-empty-and-rents-are-dropping/>

On another note, I wanted to ask if you guys would be interested in coming to JBGS for a speaker series we host every couple weeks on Friday mornings for our teams. We'd love to have you come in and talk about everything that we don't really see/hear/discuss with you as it relates to governing the County. We'd like to understand all those other priorities, concerns and issues as a way to provide our teams with the full picture of a highly functioning local government. We'd take one of you but if we could find any date in the next 2-3 months where we could get both of you, that would be ideal!

And to your earlier comment, I did enjoy some good family time over the holidays. I feel like the year is really getting started today, as our first full week back, so moving on... I hope that you are both ready for a busy year – I know I am!

Best, Andy

Christian and Katie -

I found this (albeit older - August 2018) article on Seattle's reaction to their housing issues a quick and interesting read:

Happy New Year!
